

Amarillo – uses and testimonial

Amarillo is great to use for managing flying insects around the garden, greenhouse, home and orchard.

Herewith one innovative use of Amarillo to contain flying insects.

“I am using the solar lights to attract the moths at night, very effectively.

So far the paint and the lights seem very effective. The paint has been through the recent torrential rain storms and is still just as tacky as when I applied it.

The guava moths really annihilated our feijoas last year, annihilated our plums this year and also damaged some of the macadamia trees last year. I was too late to save the plums, so the macadamias are my main focus at the moment as they are coming up to the stage where they would be damaged over the next couple of months, the caterpillars drill tiny holes through the husk and the hard shell inside, then eat into the nuts. The effectiveness of these traps should be evident in the next few months. I am hoping if I keep catching enough of them they will stop damaging our fruit.”
